Tonight on promenade drive, the same water line that broke and flooded my basement broke again. This has been a common occurrence according to multiple neighbors. You are very lucky it did not flood another basement. This pipe is obviously failing and barely holding together at the seams. How many times is it going to break before this line is completely replaced ? I'm deeply concerned that this is going to be a reoccurring issue until it's completely replaced. I have zero confidence that the repair job in front of my house is going to hold based off this lines continuing to have issues. I appreciate your consideration on this matter.
