Gantt Chart

WATER UPDATE 3/26/2024

💧 CURRENT WATER STORAGE

○ LOYDS LAKE:

- Total Storage capacity of 3625-acre feet.
- The current elevation is 7149' which is equal to 3060-acre feet.
- 84% of capacity
- April average is 1840-acre feet.

Going into April Loyds Lake is at its highest level since 2006 and well above the average level of 7134' (1840 acft). The city has the first 1000 acre feet of storage after the conservation pool of 500 acre feet. The San Juan Water Conservancy District will have some water to sale to irrigators this year, yet to be determined on how much will be sold.

○ Raw Water Reservoir #1

- 125 Acre Ft Capacity
- Currently 85 Acre Ft estimated.
- 65% of Capacity

○ Raw Water Reservoir #2

- 25 Acre Ft Capacity

- Currently 10 Acre Ft Estimated
- 40% of Capacity

- Secondary Pond

- 34 Acre Ft Capacity
- Currently 20 Acre Ft estimated.
- 60% of Capacity

CURRENT INTAKE/USE

- Blue Mountain Springs
  - Currently bringing into storage ponds 100 GPM or .144 million gallons per day
- Blue Mountain Springs Water Treatment Plant
  - Currently producing about .226 million gallons per day

We are currently using about 82,000 gallons more than we bring in per day. Which you can see in overall storage being less than it was in November. Our ponds are still in good shape this year and runoff has yet to start.

ACCUMULATED PRECIPITATION

- As of March 25, we are at 15.1" of accumulated precipitation which is 92% of average.

WATER SUPPLY FORECAST

- March 1, 2024, Forecast is giving a 50% chance of exceeding 570 acft of water run-off in South Creek which is below the average of 860 acft.
- April 1, 2024, Forecast will be available next week and will give us a better feel for what to expect this year

SECONDARY WATER RATES

- Our Drought Assessment Guide Classification- Stage 1 Normal Condition
- Recommend Waiting until after April Water Supply Forecast Published before setting rates.

- Secondary Water tentatively will be charged on April 15,2024, as long as weather conditions are favorable.
