Dan,

This is a small taste of many that support our project. Unfortunately they won't speak up against the negative voice....thought you might want this.

Derek,

I appreciate the due diligence that you and your team have done to make this process as smooth as possible and head off any issues getting the project and zoning changes approved by the city. Like with anything in life change is hard to accept sometimes and especially when it involves development and the loss of open areas. But, with that being said, if change is going to happen then we welcome it so long as it is what is proposed (1/3 acres or larger).

Due to scheduling conflicts, I don't believe we will be in attendance in the city meeting and if we were there we would just be a fly on the wall since we welcome Wright Homes to the neighborhood. I would be very interested to see a plat map if at all possible. There will obviously be a building lot that borders the west side of our lot and my wife and I are very interested in discussing the option of buying the lot that will border the west side of our property.

Is that an option? Do you have an idea of what these lots will be selling for?

Thanks again.

Respectfully,

Jeremy
