Ben Luedtke provided a brief introduction to the grant.

Ryeleigh Hewlett spoke in opposition to the grant, citing reasons the City should not promote the namesake of the grant (Mayor Bloomberg), and especially now during a time of genocide of Palestinians abroad and attacks on Muslims locally and abroad, urged the Council to reject the proposal noting that supporting this grant was supporting a man who was responsible for anti-Muslim practices.

Brian Fullmer provided a brief introduction.

Ralph Finlayson, Jose Brito, Tim Ermish, Sariah Toronto, David Neilsen, and Jessica Gwynn spoke favorably to the proposed ordinance and commented the following (in summary): pass the proposed ordinance, surrounding persons and organizations benefited the area and those in the area were pleased to reciprocate, allow the community to move forward and maintain the historical character of the neighborhood, preserving the structures (homes) showcased the durability and efficiency of historic construction methods, Princeton Avenue could serve as a model of balancing heritage, conservation, and environmental responsibility, this local historic district was not just about the Yalecrest-Princeton neighborhood, but about the City – ensuring a way to preserve neighborhoods and communities such as Glendale and Rose Park – neighborhoods with rich histories and communities that should also be preserved, making older buildings/houses more energy efficient played an essential role in meeting the community's goals for sustainability, historic structures throughout the City inspire conversations and introspection about community values, change, and opportunities to build upon the foundations which others have left.

Cindy Cromer spoke to attending the Planning Commission meeting regarding the proposed historic district and wanting to commend the supporters of the new proposed historic district for being effective despite the initial negative recommendation from the Commission and urged the Council to adopt the ordinance.

Paula Harline said she believed local historic districts could help the City reach its goals in two ways, first: ordinary citizens could get involved in the process and learn how preservation work could connect communities, and second: the City's greatest economic asset was its rarity/uniqueness and in the process of defining the City's story over time, residents themselves increased their neighborhood pride.

Council Member Dugan took a moment of personal privilege to thank the community in general and recognized the great engagement work and raising awareness not only for their neighborhood but for City's awareness of the importance of preserving historic structures and history in general.

D. COMMENTS:

There were no comments/questions.
2. Comments to the City Council. (This is a one-hour time slot for the public to comment on any City business not scheduled for a public hearing. Each person will have two minutes to talk. General comment registration closes at 7:30 p.m.)

Council Member Wharton reiterated the rules of decorum.

Hannah Orr explained how the City could effectively pass a cease-fire resolution for Palestine, reading an excerpt from a Colorado State House Representative, and said the people of Salt Lake City stood against genocide, Islamaphobia, anti-Semitism, starving and slaughter and wanted a permanent cease-fire in Palestine and for the Council to ask for it.

Jill James asked for her Council Member, Dan Dugan, to support a resolution to stop the mass murder of the innocent people of Palestine, and questioned if trans lives, black lives, and people who were marginalized could be celebrated, then why couldn't he look into their (the Palestinian people) eyes and listen to their stories.

Spencer Hardy expressed concern regarding the Council's decision to restrict the general comment period at the previous formal meeting, was appalled at the apparent

MINUTES OF THE SALT LAKE CITY COUNCIL
Tuesday, March 26, 2024

behavior of some Council Members (smiling and/or laughing), and felt uncomfortable and intimidated by the police presence that escorted people out of the meeting and building due to a disruption during the meeting.

Ryeleigh Hewlett spoke regarding the Council's inaction of a cease-fire resolution, said that every day the genocide (of Palestinian people) continued there was no safe place, and offered the option for Council Members to resign if they refused to listen to their constituents.

Janice Kimball, Housing Connect CEO, thanked the Council for the opportunity to partner with First Step House on the 44 North Apartment project.

En Canada spoke regarding no longer wanting to attend Council meetings due to feeling unsafe by the behavior of Council Members but willing to feel unsafe to fight for their people undergoing a genocide with their tax dollars, said the people desperately needed community but the Council had failed to foster a positive environment where community could thrive.

Jakey Siolo read an article regarding cities/councils in the United States who had passed resolutions for a cease-fire, cities/councils who had been reluctant to, detailed reasons why these issues directly affected their constituents and the profound impacts on the core principals of democracy.

Stewart Robinson said he was at a loss after the Council's response to previous weeks of commenting at the most recent Council Meeting by limiting the power of the people attending the meetings after they begged the Council for a cease-fire resolution, noted several places in Utah were plagued with weapons manufacturers that were directly contributing to the deaths in Palestine.

Ambreen Khan expressed disappointment that the Council held high regard for people and were thanked by people who held anti-Arab, anti-Muslim and abelist views and asked that if the Council would not divest from the State of Isreal, if they would divest from Starbucks that donated billions of dollars to Israel that funded genocide, as a small way to show support.

Council Member Young clarified that there was a proposal related to the property at the old Wells Fargo Building on the corner of 1100 East and 2100 South and that the request for staff to take action on this was not expected to be delivered upon before that proposal moved forward, this was looking future facing beyond just a single proposal.
