Presentation & Acceptance of 2023 Financial Audit

- Jason Sleight, a CPA partner at Jones Simkins, praises the Health Department for good financial management and accurate financial statements.
- The audit team found no adjustments to the accounts or financial statements, which is rare in government accounting.
- Jason reports no findings or deficiencies in the health department's internal controls or compliance with the state auditor's guide.
- Audit team tested WIC and COVID-related programs, finding no issues or findings.
- Motion to accept the financial audit by David Zook
 - Second: Blake Rose

Utah Health Place Index

- Sarah Hodson from DHHS introduces the Healthy Places Index, a tool that shows community conditions and ranks them based on social determinants of health.
- Sarah demonstrates the tool by showing the differences in neighborhoods. Sharing the following information:
 - Explains different areas of the score, including housing indicators such as home ownership, housing habitability, and uncrowded housing.
 - Provides information on preschool enrollment and other measures, including data sources and racial equity considerations.
 - Highlights 400 indicators in the tool, including health outcomes like diabetes, heart disease, and cancer rates.
 - Shows how to filter data by indicator, income level, and other factors to gain insights into community health.
 - Compares HPI score and adult smoking rates on two maps, noting areas with less healthy conditions have higher smoking rates.
 - Demonstrates ranking feature, showing least healthy census tracts within Bear River Health District.
 - Highlights a mapping tool to identify areas with low insurance rates and potential policy opportunities.
- Cheryl Atwood and others discussed using a dashboard to track health indicators and policy solutions.
- Holly and her team incorporated map data into their community health improvement plan.

 - Second: David Zook

Suicide Fatality Review Board Discussion

- Farrin mentions Dr. Michael Staley's discussion addressing suicide prevention strategies and a Fatality Review Board.
- Farrin introduces the local vs. statewide Fatality Review Board for suicide prevention.
 - Mentions Dr. Staley's invitation to participate on a local Fatality Review Board, which could help the health district organize its courses and get a feel for how the state-level board works.
 - Dr. Staley has invited local participants from the health district, including Farrin, to sit on a quarterly state review board to discuss fatalities and implement interventions.
 - Dr. Staley suggested to Farrin using a state-led review process to ensure consistency and expertise.
 - Local participants could represent the community's landscape and identify unique trends.
- Farrin suggests coordinating community participation in quarterly Fatality Reviews to identify local suicide trends and inform interventions.
- Recommendations for local interventions and resource allocation will be made based on findings from these reviews.
- Discussion regarding establishing a suicide prevention board with limited resources.
 - Cheryl Atwood emphasizes the need for resources to address community issues.
 - Speakers discuss suicide prevention in their health district, aiming to identify causes and implement interventions.
- Jordan Mathis suggests, due to lack of local resources, the state-wide suicide review board would be a great start and then revisit in the next 12-18 months.
- David Zook motions to approve the recommendations.
 - Second: Randy Williams

Merit System Review Discussion

- Josh Greer discusses updating the current merit system to include paid for performance, flexibility in raises based on evaluation scores.
- Health department seeks more flexibility in grades and raises, tied to employee performance throughout the year.

- Discussion regarding how to incentivize high-performing employees. The hope is to keep those employees in a way that allows them to continue performing at their best without supervisory roles.
- Josh suggests investigating ways to update the current evaluation system to tie it into job descriptions and ensure fairness in evaluations.
- Implementing performance-based evaluations, challenges with managing and rating employee performance.
 - Cade Palmer talks about how implementing pay for performance can be tricky to manage.
 - Blake Rose mentions leaders may struggle with rating performance objectively, leading to variation in reviews.
 - Board members discuss challenges with evaluating employee performance, considering cultural and supervisory factors.
 - Cheryl Atwood and others discuss challenges with employee evaluations and merit-based hiring.
 - Employees' well-being and retention are crucial, but so is balancing salaries with inflation and sustainability.
- The Board would like Human Resources to move forward with reviewing the merit based system.
