7. State Privacy Officer Report

State Privacy Officer Dr. Whitney Phillips provided an update on her office's privacy health checks that assess current privacy practices for the various governmental entities in Utah. Dr. Phillips said most entities that have been assessed so far are at ad-hoc status, but the process has been helpful for them to determine pain points in privacy practices in the entities.

One aspect of privacy that entities tend to overlook or ignore is the use of generative AI in completing governmental tasks. To aid entities to come into compliance with new regulations, Dr. Phillips and her team have developed a privacy toolkit that provides helpful resources, such as a generative AI policy.
