PUBLIC COMMENTS
Laurene Starkey, of Kaysville, addressed the Commission regarding planning for Davis County's Code Blue Winter Response Plan to provide homeless services. She asked Commissioners to take into consideration that Kaysville City already serves the underprivileged through 120 units of mercy housing at the Francis Peak Apartments and through the women's crisis shelter, which handles approximately 3,100 people per year. She noted decisions regarding the Code Blue Winter Response Plan have to be made on August 1, then asked for information about progress toward making those decisions and whether it would be possible to exempt Kaysville since it's already helping. During her comment time, she asked a series of additional questions, including: Task force meetings are closed, so how will citizens will be informed about decisions? Since there are "no teeth" in the law, is it necessary to comply? Could this [Code Blue Response] go away next year, as she has heard from some legislators? Will the response be on a rotating basis?

Commissioner Stevenson explained Code Blue Plan decisions will not be made by the County Commission but by a task force that includes mayors from various cities in the County. Commissioner Stevenson is the one Commissioner currently serving on the task force. He said the next task force meeting has not been scheduled, but hopefully all cities within the County will have a potential shelter location to consider. Decisions will be made based upon which are the best locations to be able to handle the situation for the coming winter. Commissioner Stevenson offered his opinion that task force meetings are closed to the public, in part, because this is a very sensitive issue. He promised that concerns of citizens from all Davis County cities, including Kaysville, have been heard. He explained the plan requirement was put in place by the Legislature, and there are teeth in the law – there needs to be a plan by August 1, and if there isn't a plan the State Homeless Services can and will put something in place. If legislation is changed the requirement could go away but, for this year, Code Blue is in place. Commissioner Stevenson emphasized that the task force, not the County, has to turn a plan in to the state by August 1. A rotating response has been talked about, but no final decision has been made. This year's Code Blue plan will not necessarily be made public when the decision is made, because it has to be turned in to the State Homeless Services for approval.

There was some discussion of last year's Code Blue response, which included hotel and motel vouchers administered by the Community Action Agency's Open Doors program that serves Davis and Morgan counties. There were issues with the number of hotels willing to participate. Concern was also expressed about individuals, who were not Davis County residents, who traveled to the County to get a voucher. The voucher program was overwhelmed and ran out of funding in February.

Commissioner Stevenson said he doesn't know if there will be a press release or other formal process for sharing the decision with the public, once it's been approved. He invited Laurene Starkey to contact him after August 2 to discussion the plan.

Commissioner Kamalu commented that the Davis Journal has published articles about the Code Blue legislation. She suggested that those interested in the task force decision look for articles in the newspaper.

Jill Dredge, of Kaysville, asked why cities that don't have any homeless present are being considered [as a location for a Code Blue shelter].

Commissioner Stevenson said it is a misconception that some cities don't have any homeless people. He explained that all cities have people who need a place to live, but instead of a person standing on a street corner with a sign saying, "Will work for food," it may be a mom whose spouse left and she doesn't have money to pay rent, so she's living in her car with two kids. He said last year's Davis County Point in Time count included a man sleeping in his car because he had a job but not enough money for an apartment. These people don't want to be sleeping in a car, or at a friend's house or asking for subsistence; they want help.

Commissioner Kamalu added that domestic violence is a big driver of homelessness, including in Kaysville.

Shawn Rasmussen, [city of residence not stated], expressed his belief that the greatest growth in the homeless population is among the working homeless who cannot afford a home. He then addressed his primary reason for commenting, which is his concern about the national upcoming election. He offered his opinion that neither candidate for President, Joe Biden and Donald Trump, seem to be leaders or qualified to meet the challenges that America is facing. He also expressed concern about what he perceives as a lack of accountability in the upcoming election. He said networks of power, from the mayoral level of government to the governor's level, can put pressure on organizations to change how this year is shaping up. He pointed to the handling of the Jeffrey Epstein case as an example of the lack of accountability. Stating that Utah is known as a more principled, conservative and religious state than others, he asked what Utahns are doing to combat the evils in the Country, and what elected members of the establishment are doing to hold our establishment accountable.

BOARD OF EQUALIZATION
8. #614/2024. Property Tax Register 07-09-2024 — *presented by Curtis Koch, County Auditor

Auditor Koch offered a point of clarification regarding the Property Tax Register presented during the July 2, 2024, Commission Meeting. The adjustment listed under Assessor's Adjustments, for $953,500,470.00, was a value correction. Because there is no place for Information Systems corrections, it needed to go through a value correction. Value corrections occur under the Assessor's Adjustments portion of the register, but the error was in no way related to the County Assessor; rather, it was related to a programming issue that did not recognize decimals. The Auditor emphasized that this was not an error made by the Assessor.

The Property Tax Register for 07/09/2024 was presented and contained the following: Auditor's Adjustments consisting of Tax Exempt Requests, Appeals reports, Abatement reports, and Corrections; and Treasurer's Adjustments. This record is maintained by the Davis County Auditor as the Clerk of the Board of Equalization.

BOARD OF CANVASS
9. #599/2024. Canvassing of the June 25, 2024 Election — *presented by Brian McKenzie, County Clerk

Clerk Brian McKenzie explained that State law specifies the County's legislative body serve as the Board of Canvass. The law also specifies that a majority, but no less than three, of those members be present. If one or more Commissioners are not available, there is a set order for substitutes: Treasurer, Assessor, and then Sheriff. Those officials were not available, so Chief Deputy Sheriff Andy Oblad was invited to participate as a member of the Board of Canvass in place of the Sheriff.

Motion to appoint Chief Oblad to the Board of Canvass: Bob J Stevenson. Second: Lorene Kamalu. All present voted aye.

Clerk McKenzie stated that the canvass is an important step in the finalization of the election process for the Primary Election held on June 25, 2024. Clerk McKenzie shared information regarding the various documents compiled in the Canvass report packet [Attachment A]. The packet includes the Clerk's certification that the attached documents are the full, complete and true tabulation reports of the election. Results of the Pre-Election Test and Audit and a Ballot Reconciliation report are also part of the packet. The Clerk pointed out that the final ballot reconciliation was off by one vote history and one ballot. He explained that one ballot envelope was received with paper inside, but the paper appeared to be a statement rather than a ballot. Another document in the packet certifies the Post-Election Audit, conducted by citizen auditors in the presence of observers, on July 3. It was noted that no discrepancies were found by the auditors. Certifications regarding voter histories, voter lists, software validation, and chain of custody of the ballots, are included in the documents. The statistical report, which is required by the State of Utah, shows the number of ballots received, how many were counted or not counted, and reasons for every ballot that was challenged. The Clerk said great effort was put into contacting voters whose ballots were challenged, to provide them opportunity to resolve issues, and the majority of those ballots were cured by the voters. The Clerk read the attached Summary of Official Results of the election.

Clerk McKenzie said the Canvass report represents a significant amount of work by many people. He thanked his staff for their work on the election, especially Election Manager Lori Schiess. He also thanked supporting departments, including the Sheriff's Office and Information Systems, as well as the Board of Canvass and members of the public who participate and volunteer in the election process.
