She outlined the department's external mission to enrich the City by championing artists and creating cultural experiences, alongside its internal mission to create an equitable arts council. Executive Director Helmers detailed the strategic action plan, which focused on creating equitable artist opportunities, restructuring community art classes, executing a brand campaign, launching at least one new program, and drafting a comprehensive public art policy through a one percent for art Ordinance. She reviewed recent successes, including the South Salt Lake Zines partnership with Promise South Salt

Lake, a networking event at the Material Art Gallery, and a new interactive mural created by Trevor Doll. She also highlighted upcoming events like Craftoberfest, which would feature plein air artists and a puzzle mural by Mason Fetzer. Executive Director Helmers announced the call for walls for the tenth year of Mural Fest and a fall crisp air event at Pia Okwai.

During the question segment, Council Member Glad inquired about funding sources beyond grants. Executive Director Helmers clarified that while they were awaiting funds from several grant applications, they also secured sponsorships, noting that Mark Miller Subaru funded the puzzle mural.
