Purpose

The City Council conducted a walkabout at the Oakley City Trail Park to observe trail conditions and consider the park's current trail-use classifications. Participants discussed whether the classifications should be revisited.

Discussion Summary

- Trail-use classifications: Participants considered the current allocation of trails for mountain biking, walking, and horseback riding and discussed whether the balance among these uses should be reconsidered.
- Trail use observed: The youngest group of the South Summit mountain bike team was present and using the trail under consideration, which was also walked by the participants during the walkabout.
- Safety: The group discussed safety concerns associated with different users sharing or crossing the same trails.

- Multiuse trail impacts: Participants raised concerns about damage associated with multiuse trails, specifically damage from horseback riding on trails used or designated for mountain biking.
- Potential reclassification: The discussion included whether certain trails should be reclassified to better address user needs, safety, and trail conditions. No reclassification decision was made during the walkabout.
