

Jackie Lowry has a long history of work and volunteer activity with both governmental and non-governmental environmental organizations. Jackie is currently Programs Manager for the Utah Society for Environmental Education (USEE), celebrating its 35th year promoting environmental education in the state of Utah.

Locally, Jackie has worked for the Stokes Nature Center's Nature Preschool, heads the planning committee for the Cache Clean Air Consortium, has been Co-Leader for Citizens' Climate Lobby–Cache Valley, was VP of the Board for the Cache Interagency Council, and volunteers for the Cache Youth Resource Center.

Prior to living in Cache Valley, Jackie worked for the US Forest Service in various positions, most recently as Special Uses Manager. She was a Peace Corps Volunteer in Uruguay where she formed and advised the Departmental de Rivera's first environmental NGO, secured grants to establish organic community gardens in poor outlying neighborhoods of the city, and conducted environmental education in schools. Also, she was a Staff Member for the Environmental Learning Center at Colorado State University.

Jackie has a B.A. in Sociology and M.Sc. in Natural Resources, Recreation and Tourism.

Gary SaxtonSecretary of the Future, Logan Downtown Alliance

Gary received a bachelor's degree from the David Eccles School of Business, University of Utah. After graduating, his first job landed him in London, England to develop international business within the IBM marketplace. Returning back to Utah, Gary began working with the Salt Lake Organizing Committee licensing merchandise for the 2002 Olympic Winter Games. Gary moved with his wife Shelly and 4 children to Cache Valley in 1999 to enjoy the outdoor lifestyle, clean air, and cool climate of northern Utah. Gary began working with the Logan Downtown Alliance in 2010 to bolster the future economic vitality of downtown.