Subject: Animal control officer?
Our planning commission was wondering if any of the local towns have a designated animal control officer. Our maintenance guys respond to animal control calls but do not patrol for strays. We have a big problem with people allowing their dogs to wander wherever they like. There was discussion of hiring someone part time just to handle animal control but did not budget for that. We also think it would be better to have someone who does not live in Ferron so they will not be tempted just to return the dog to the owner if it belongs to their friend or family. We're thinking if any of you have an animal control officer, we could hire them to drive through Ferron once a week or even once a month.
Any feedback would be appreciated

We have a designated Animal Control Officer. It is part of his duties as one of our maintenance workers. He does patrol for strays, and that is overtime work. I don't know the schedule to patrol for strays. Out maintenance workers all have city owned cell phones, so when someone calls for animal control, we give out his number.

Hi Brittany,

One of our maintenance guys is designated as the animal control officer, he does this along with his other duties. We have also hired a part-time weekend and holiday animal control person, we pay him $50.00 per day. We do charge the dog owner an impound fee if we take a dog to the shelter, this fee increases with each occurrence. Emery Animal is not suppose to release the dog unless proof of the paid impound fee is given. Our biggest issue is getting the courts to back us up on citations and the sheriffs office help us with the difficult owners.

Our Council fully supports our animal control officer, Robert.
