Thursday, June 23, 2022 at 7:00 P.M.

Members Present: Janis McClellan, Kelly Holtman, Heather Smith, Jason McGuire, Laura Gailard, Janell Payne, Triana Ord

Members Absent: Jennifer Fisher, Clarissa West, Aldo Del Bosque

A. Welcome, Roll Call, and Introduction: Heather Smith

B. Minute Approval

B.1. May Minutes: Kelly Holtman motioned to approve and Heather Smith seconded.

C. New Business:

C.1. Upcoming Public Art Installation

- Trail Wall Mural: Additional panel installation planned for July by student artist who originally submitted proposal for ball complex mural project.
- Utility Box Wraps: Staff are still trying to locate new vendor who will respond to inquiries and is able to wrap boxes for the City. Laura Gailard offered to share a vendor contact that the Daybreak Arts Council has used and been happy with.

C.2. Get to the River Planning

- A potential community art project and installation on the Jordan River Trail as part of the Get to the River event in September was discussed. The general consensus was that the half wall opposite the existing trail wall murals would be a prime location. Budget was discussed and the members present agreed that a total budget amount not to exceed $5,000 would be appropriate. Staff will work on putting together a request for proposals and work with events group to coordinate project in conjunction with traditional activities.

C. 3. Bingham Creek Art Project

- Members present expressed a desire to work with the Bingham Creek Park Authority to install artwork in conjunction with the opening of the first phase of the regional park. A concept map was looked at during the meeting, but it was agreed that a site visit would be most helpful in determining feasibility and what type of installation would be best to propose for the park. Bingham Creek Park Authority interest and support for an art installation was also unknown, but Janell Payne offered to reach out and meet with the board to gauge interest. Staff will report back their findings at the next Arts Council meeting.

C.4. Sculpture Program Discussion

- No contact has been made with Nate Brimhall since the last Arts Council meeting when this program was last discussed. Nate was previously identified as a possible resource to get this program started. Potential locations for sculpture installations were discussed. The present members seemed to agree that a rotating sculpture program that featured different artists would keep things fresh and that they would like to work out some details and budget for this program in the next fiscal year (23-24).

C.5. Annual Training Scheduling

- Janell Payne let the Arts Council know that annual committee and council training was available on online and could be done on member's individual schedules or that staff could arrange for an in-person training led by the City's legal office. Members present opted to go with the online training, which staff will email out to members.

C.6. Co-Op with Riverton City: Broadway Kids

- Heather Smith introduced the Broadway Kids program, which the Riverton Arts Council is putting on. The Riverton Arts Council's usual program venue is under construction and a potential partnership, with South Jordan City providing space at the Community Center, was discussed. Staff will look into what partnership options would make sense in this case and Heather will gather some additional details from the Riverton Arts Council about the program, its participants, and dates/times requested.

C. 7. Family Service Night Potential Project

- Ann Lobos from the South Jordan Rotary and Family Service Nights attended the meeting and spoke to the Arts Council about a care package project her organization is working on for military veterans. Potential components of the project were discussed and included a T-shirt or hat with artwork on the front, thank you cards for volunteer children to color, and a video thank you card where people could record a message thanking veterans for their service. The Arts Council offered suggestions on how to efficiently put together these items and discussed the possibility of having a video booth for thank you messages at future Arts Council events and activities. Ann said she would get back in touch with the Arts Council once ideas are more flushed out.

D. Unfinished Business:

D.1. Theater Production Update:

- Triana Ord and Heather Smith updated the Arts Council on the progress of the Music Man theater production. Triana had created a sign-up sheet for ticketing, ushering, and clean up shifts and posted to the Music Man Basecamp page. Arts Council members were encouraged to look at the sheet and sign up for shifts that they were available to help with. City staff and South Jordan Youth Council members were also volunteering and helping fill these needs.
