 - TEC discussions regarding concurrence with penalties / Reed
 - Timestamp 07:05
 - Reed discusses the process for obtaining the TEC's concurrence with a stipulation and order for a penalty. Stipulations have all been scrutinized by the respondent, the UID's lawyers, and the administrative law judge, and all parties have agreed that the action is explicable and supported by the law. The information contained in the stipulation and order is enough for the TEC to make a determination regarding concurrence.

 - Timestamp 27:00

- Hot Topics
 - Loans using an attorney opinion letter / Matt Sager
 - Timestamp 27:45
 - Matt discusses the recent issue that has arisen with attorney opinion letters (AOL) and the UID's recent bulletin regarding them.

- There is discussion about the differences and similarities between AOLs, closing indemnification letters (CIL), and policies of title insurance.
- There is discussion about various possible situations involving AOLs and CILs, and whether they would be insurance in those cases. In most cases, they're very similar but likely not actual insurance products. It's a complex issue.
- The bulletins from 2010 and 2012 regarding indemnification should stand as boundaries, and AOLs should be reviewed within those boundaries, and a determination needs to be made about whether an AOL is an authorized insurance product.
- There may be a risk to the public if AOLs and CILs require agents to come up with cash that they don't have to handle an indemnification. Agencies will need to know of the risks and know what they're signing.
- The UID will need to review the AOLs and CILs to determine whether they're insurance products. The Idaho Department of Insurance has been talking with United Wholesale Mortgage (UWM) about the letters they use, and may have a contact at UWM that can provide copies of their letters to the UID.
- Synergy Title news report / Kim
 - Timestamp 58:30
 - Title insurance with post-policy fraud protection may be a remedy for the homeowners.
 - Topic will be on the agenda to discuss with the REC at the next TEC/REC meeting.
