    Seth Gardner brought up his concern with a patient transport this past week, an underage patient who had been injured badly.; when contacting medical control, they were instructed not to administer pain medication to the patient. They did all the protocols for him to receive pain medication. The patient's parent was also in the ambulance, and the other was in a car following behind the ambulance. At this point, the parent asked them to stop the ambulance, and they got off with the patient, put him into their car, and drove him to the Richfield hospital.
